This integrated CO\textsubscript{2} DA software consists of four major components that share a data pipeline, shown by the blue arrows. Each of these component can be constructed as a computer system consisting of a set of processors, memory, and a high-speed network interconnect (not shown here) and local disk storage. This system may be realized as a physical system or as a virtual system running in a hosted environment.